“ I realize that this is out of the clear blue sky - but Al was a very treasured friend of our family here in California . . . over the years, I have tried to find him - and sadly I just did. I would have loved to tell him how wonderfully my kids turned out and how much they still love him 35 years later. They both still have the various crafts that he made with them.

My now-ex-husband had some business dealings with Al and Jerry - which he reneged on. It made Jerry so angry that they never spoke to us again . . . it was very sad for me and the kids (although we certainly understood why). I hope he had a great life after returning to Texas . . . he certainly deserved it . . .

“ If you look in the dictionary under the word "Heart" this man's picture should be there. He was the only person I knew that would bend over backwards for anyone no matter what the reason was. If you wanted the shoes he was wearing he would give them to you. Uncle Al always put everyone first and wanted to give to everyone he could. He is dearly missed but we know he is better and he can now focus on himself and making himself happy. I don't know if I ever told you enough but thank you for everything. I love you and miss you.
