“ Growing up a few miles east across Brushy Creek from Uncle Erwin, often in the summer we could hear the distinct sound of that silage cutter across the bottom land and know Richard, Henry, their Dad and the rest of the family were busy. Sometimes Uncle Erwin would drive over (we had no phone) to visit and ask Dad if I could be spared for a day or two as another truck driver. Working with my Uncle’s family for me was like Disney for today’s kids. Henry taught me that the loaded truck always has the right of way but I think he liked to push it and I was always a little jumpy so sometimes on those one lane winding roads through the woods I’d stop the loaded truck to avoid a certain crash but Henry would pull over at the last second and wait for me to pass. I imagine he chuckled over those ... “whapped ‘em again”.

“ Janette, the best memories are of thanksgiving. With the big table filled with a huge turkey, mashed potatoes, gravy and all the other trays of food. But there was one thing we would forget for Henry....The KETSUP, as every body knows a slab of turkey breast has to served with the special condiment. Thus a new tradition was started in the RAVEN holiday tradition. Your Bro
