“ All of my childhood memories revolve around my grandma. Seeing how to love openly and honestly raising an entire neighborhood with a perpetually open door, learning how to cook, how to get any and every stain out of laundry, how to fish, how to become the matriarch to keep the family together. I got to go on so many fishing trips to the cabin every summer because the boy grandchildren couldn't be trusted to behave together. I would get upset if she tried to return my perch to the water so she would keep and clean them all, while knowing I wasn't going to eat them. My grandma picked me up from school when I was sick, took me to the doctor, and was the stop off on the way home after school for a snack. My whole life I wanted to be you grandma and I hope I have become even a little bit of the goodness you upheld. You will be forever missed and loved. Missy

“ I remember many things but especially when I had Chicken Pox on my ear drums and body. Hurting so bad and laying across Moms chest with her gently rubbing me. I love my Mother. EJ
